

Morphing

Four saxophone players, internationally renowned and playing Bach just as easily as they do those French chansons that typically tell a story. Their programme for the Festival offers us an interesting cocktail: there will be Mozart, of course, but also Aznavour – well, why not? and Bach – self-evident perhaps, but, Joe Dassin? ... No need to panic! The saxophone is a “recent” instrument that possesses a polymorphic quality allowing it to portray an infinite variety of expressive and artistic nuances. A subtle mix of ultra-classic arrangements and music from songs that stir up our memories, this concert promises to be moving, passionate and joyous. It will also give you a sneak preview of their latest album, “Le Temps d’une Chanson”, recorded at the Ferme de Villefavard under the label Chapeau l’Artiste.
